POLICE GUARD BRIDE'S HOME IN SACCO CASE

Steele as the man she saw sitting in an automobile near the hold-up scene, with a revolver in his hand.

All night long policemen guarded her home in a sparsely settled section of Brockton, and today the officers were relieved by others. The newest and most puzzling feature had its inception last night when Milton Williams, husband of the bride, found a red dress, middle-aged man, apparently an American, outside.

The stranger asked in Mrs. Williams' name, and Williams said his wife, believing the man to be an old friend, and Mrs. Williams is living in the same house as she resided before marriage.

FLASHES OUT PHOTO. When Mrs. Williams reached the door the stranger whirled a photograph out of his pocket. It was a picture of a man of foreign appearance.

Verily, the stranger told her he was from the Bronx, and she recognized any of the four men. When she rolled in the negative, he asked if any of the four men in the picture bore resemblance to any man she had seen near the Slater-Merrill shoe factory, where the murders were committed and where she was employed, and still is employed.

Again she answered in the negative, at which the man turned a bit, replaced the photograph and hurried away.

POLICE GUARDING HOUSE

Williams immediately notified the police of the strange happening and two patrolmen were sent to guard the house. They were relieved early today by two more, although Mrs.

Yum! Yum! Crop of Watermelons at $12,000,000

Chicago, June 3 (A.P.)—More watermelons are expected this season than ever before known in the United States except once. The government bureau of agricultural economics reported today that the peak of the movement will be reached within the next few weeks.

Highest increases are looked for from Georgia, 25 per cent as compared with last year. Down in Texas, a crop which takes half the season only to Georgia as the champion watermelon producer, the eastern sections may double the 1925 output.

Apparently, a ripe red watermelon crop having a farm value of more than $12,000,000 is in sight.

Williams declared she was not frightened.

As a result of the wrecking of John's farm, a committee of West Bridgewater citizens was formed today to raise a relief fund and rebuild the house.

Former District Attorney Albert F. Barker, of Norfolk County, heads the committee which includes the justice Howard C. White, Walter C. Whittier and James A. Hennessey, and Mrs. Catherine H. Howard, town treasurer, who also is treasurer for the committee.

PRECAUTIONS CONTINUED. In telling of the formation of the committee to rebuild the town, for chairman Barker declared today that he does not believe the Johnson bombing was an error but believes the house was bombed because Johnson, who owned the garage where Sacco and Vanzetti left their automobile, was directly responsible for the men's apprehension.

The blowing of the dynamite bomb, which came before the majestic Brockton visit, imperiled the lives of Samuel Johnson in West Bridgewater, and those of his wife, mother and four children.

WIFE BEATER IS GIVEN 30-DAY JAIL SENTENCE

Antonio Monaco, Bremen street, East Boston, told Judge John J. Burns in East Boston court today that he beat his wife when she didn't obey him. Monaco was sentenced to thirty days in the House of Correction.

"I'll give you a chance to go to the house for a day or two," Judge Burns told Monaco. Monaco's wife had complained that he was continually beating her.

of suspected violation of the dry law.

STAY GRANTED. Smith later asked for a stay of execution of sentence pending an appeal to the Appellate Court. Judge Goddard granted the motion and continued Carroll's bail of $1,000.

In addition, the judge made the bail bond "world wide," which will give Carroll the privilege of traveling under bond. He had been forced to stay in the immediate vicinity of New York while awaiting sentence.

Carroll, who had seemed depressed at the all sentence, regained his spirits when he realized he would not have to go to jail at once.

As court broke up Carroll became cheerful. Once outside the courtroom he was a broad grin.

"The courts will never see me again," he said. "It was a good show," he said. "It was a good show," he said.

ONE OF HIS SHOW GIRLS. It was later revealed the girl was Mary Dowling, a dancer in the Carroll show. Miss Dowling, it was said, had an audience with Judge Goddard before court convened and made a plea for clemency. She said Carroll had looked after her when she was ill with appendicitis, had paid all her hospital bills and later taken her back in the show.

It was also learned that Carroll's counsel had presented a petition for discharge, signed by Carroll's employer.

DEED TO CEMETERY LOT IS OFFERED AS BAIL

Arrested for drunkenness, Herbert E. Finney, an aged resident of Washington street, South End, offered Camberlain's deed to his cemetery lot as bail.

"Do I have to stay here till court time?" he asked Police Captain Timothy Leahy of the East Cambridge station.

"Not if you've got real estate to put up as bail," replied the "captain."

"Here you are," Finney said, and pulled from a pocket the deed to his future grave.

Captain Leahy could find no authorization in the regulations to permit that kind of bail. Finney was later fined $5 by Judge Arthur P. Stone, but finding all his pockets he could find but $4, which he handed over.

"Keep your money," Judge Stone told him. "We can't have you leaving here broke. Come in Saturday and pay up."

MILL ON LOSS BY FIRE IN CANADA

water pressure was not good. Though the stores in the commercial section are full of stone and brick, they did not resist the flames and one after the other they were destroyed. In succession, five large warehouses were burned down and then the stores nearly fell easy prey.

Even the Montmartre Hotel Works were partly destroyed and then the fire extended to the residential quarter.

The homes of three physicians were destroyed.

The Central Hotel, the Dubé and Stone store, the Traversier, Pelletier and Proulx stores and adjoining warehouses could not be saved by the firemen. Help was sought at that point from Quebec, 125 miles away. Quebec firemen came here by a Canadian National Railway special (at car train).

Mayor Charles Dubé estimated the loss at over one million dollars. About three-quarters of the losses are understood to be covered by insurance, but, coming at the time of the year when the tourist season has just opened, the indirect loss is heavy. However, the Boninier resort section, St. Patrice and La Pointe, have not been affected.

Among the principal commercial establishments destroyed were: J. B. Renaud, provision merchant; F. Renaud, hardware merchant; Dr. J. E. Levesque, dentist; Dr. E. Cloutier, drug store; Alphonse Humeau, merchant; Mrs. A. Levesque, book store; Grand Central Hotel; Dubé and Stone, merchant; L. P. Proulx, merchant; Ed. Gauthier, bakery; J. Thivierge, merchant; Messier Harris Co., Ltd., branch J. A. Pelletier, merchant; Les Quinze Saloons, store.

DORCHESTER SCHOOL GIRLS, 15, SCOLDED, VANISH

POLICE USE RAIN TO SPREAD ALARM

Doris Mason and Louise Powers One a Week; Packed Their Grips

Reprimanded by the headmaster of Dorchester High School because they played hookie, two 15-year-old Dorchester girls have vanished with their personal effects, and are the object of a widespread hunt by police today.

The girls are Doris Mason, daughter of Dr. Gilbert M. Mason, prominent Dorchester physician, No. 344 Adams street, and Louise Powers, daughter of Mrs. Louise Powers of No. 18 Newport avenue.

Although the girls disappeared from their homes last Friday, nearly a week later, their absence was revealed for the first time when a radio hunt for them was begun.

Mother of the girls believe they fled to avoid further difficulties at high school. They say the girls "packed" school a week ago and were reprimanded on Tuesday, that they stayed away.

The girls are again scolded, and on Friday they disappeared, packing their things in suitcases.

Belief that the girls may have gone to New York to attempt to get into theatricals has been expressed. Both were intensely interested in the stage. They had but $44 between them when they left.

GIRLS' DESCRIPTIONS:
Both Mrs. Powers and Mrs. Mason said the girls need have nothing to fear if they return.

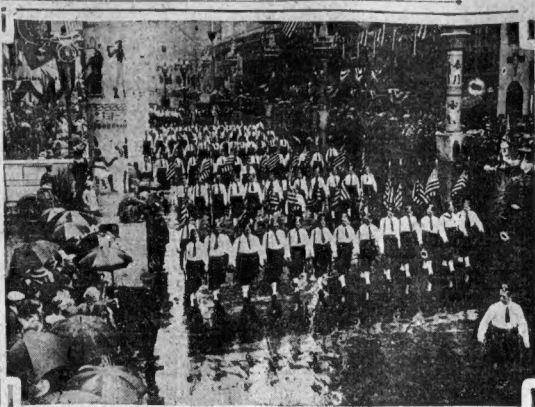

The Mason girl is described as a feet one inch, in height, and weighs 110 pounds. She has light hair and light complexion, and wears a blue coat with a cape collar, a hat with blue stripes, gray stockings, and black shoes. She took a black suitcase, inscribed with the monogram "M. A. M."

The Powers girl is also 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighs 125 pounds, has a dark complexion, brown bobbed hair, wears a navy blue velvet coat, a rose-colored dress, gray stockings, black patent leather shoes, and a green hat.

HEAVY STORMS CAUSE DAMAGE IN FRANCE

Paris, June 3 (A.P.)—There is not much of France on which rain is not falling, except in Central Auvergne, where it is showing or falling.

A torrent of almost cyclonic violence accompanied the rain along the coast of Brittany. It is playing havoc with small craft. Harbors are filled with storm-bound ships. A tidal wave is expected to strike the coast of Brittany. At Lorient the water rose ten feet in a matter of seconds. Considerable damage was done on shore.

'SUNSHINE GIRL' FIGHTS VERDICT

The will of Charles N. Shaw, "candy king," broken by a jury verdict in a contest suit brought by his cousin, Mrs. Effie P. Lightship of Orange, N. J., will be taken to the Supreme Court on exceptions.

This was announced by Attorney Samuel Hoor, counsel for the will, shortly after the jury's verdict became known. Under the verdict the estate is deprived of some $100,000, and Charles Isaac Harold Angell and his wife, Lillian Farnsworth, employees of Shaw, who, testimony shows, was generous to her blakes to the "candy king," receive nothing.

Judge Whitting, who presided at the trial, reserved the right, with the jury's permission, enter a verdict for the executor of the estate, Captain Angell, if he so decides. This reservation was made before the verdict was announced.

The questions put to the jury were: "Was said Charles N. Shaw of sound mind at the time of the execution of the instrument which is now pronounced as his last will?" "Was the instrument procured for probate at the last will of Charles N. Shaw procured to be made by fraud or undue influence of Lillian H. Angell, Isaac Harold Angell and Robert M. Goodwin?"

RUSH WARSHIP TO EGYPT

London, June 3 (A.P.)—"Distinctly grave" is the character of the situation in British official circles to the Egyptian situation, much aggravated by the recent sweeping victory of Zaglul Pasha's party in the elections.

The British Government has made clear it would not favor the return of Zaglul Pasha to power as premier.

Judge Felix Kerbow has resigned as head of the native court of appeal, which tried seven men charged with political murders connected with the assassination in 1924 of Sir Lee Stack, ruler of the Egyptian Army.

Judge Kerbow was arrested by two native judges. Unanimity of the court is not essential in Egyptian criminal law, and all but one of the accused men were acquitted.

Kerbow resigned because he said the verdict was a grave miscarriage of justice.

Springfield, June 2.—Spurred to action by the fourth holding within a week, the police of West Springfield are making an intensive search for four bandits who robbed John Yates, West Springfield farmer of $100.

Taken, an aged man, was enticed to a lonely road several miles from his home, on a pretense of selling him a piece of land. Negotiations had been carried on for several days and when he rode with the four men he carried $100 in cash. He was held up at the point of revolver and compelled to hand over all his money.

go on an important errand from Florence. "If I go, who will remain? If I remain, who is there to get?"

The Liberal Party is weak enough already. Take Lloyd George out, it would be a political disfigurement, ruling by its own light weight.

STOCKS IN WALL STREET and elsewhere closed yesterday with a cheerful tone. Money was cheap and plentiful. Stocks were up again and bears had "a tear in the eye, though the lip may be gay." Farmers are expected to get a thousand million dollars for this year's wheat. It isn't enough, but as a cautious grain speculator remarked, "It is better than being hit on the head with a sharp stone."

A BAD SPOT for farmers and for Republicans that want to get elected this year in the price of corn. "Our best financial minds," that like to see Republican elected, would do well to improve corn prices between now and election, and not rely on bad weather and a small crop to put up the price.

D. R. JAGGER, government volcano expert, brings from Hawaii an interesting device. Stored in basement of cellar, this household atomograph will warn the family of any coming earthquake sufficiently in advance. That Japanese New York, told that a big earthquake fault runs from the Statue of Liberty up the Hudson River. But many little earthquakes rumble mean nothing, and after a few warnings families will become as indifferent to earthquake warnings as workmen do to bare of dynamite.

THE VACUUM OIL COMPANY buys 120,000 tons of kerosene from Russia. The Bolsheviks like this means a "step toward Soviet and American business relations. Russia may be assured that when she has gold, platinum, petroleum, or anything of that kind for sale, she can do business with us, this country merely reserving the right to tell Russia how she ought to run her government."

COMMANDER BYRD, first to fly over the North Pole, has credit to play Bertie, his pilot, and "star of the team," that is the flying. That shows good spirit. Mussolini has roared awarded honor and full credit to the Italian, Nobile, pilot and designer of the Italian built Norge, Amundsen's dirigible that followed Byrd over the Pole.

GERTIE DE EDELHEID, extraordinary young American swimmer, will try the English Channel once more, and says, "Last year's experience will help me. It should help me to see to it that another heavy meal before she enters the water. A thoroughbred horse eats nothing on the morning of the race. Men know how to handle horses, but don't know how to handle themselves. Millions of young Americans eat heartily and immediately dance the Charleston violently, adding a heavy percentage to the American dyspepsia record. Tell that to your children."

ACCIO and Yanzetti, condemned murderers, are defended by radical organizations that deny their guilt. Recently the house of a witness testifies against them was bombed by alleged friends of the condemned men. The proceeding extermination, a result of the bombing, that he will seek "immediate sentence of death." If the men are guilty, they should pay the penalty. But if they are executed, it should be because of their own deeds, not because of anybody else's acts. Justice should prove that it really is justice, not hatred or impulse, no matter how great it proves to be.

MARRIED 73 YEARS, YARMOUTH COUPLE WINS 'EARLY TO WED' PRIZE

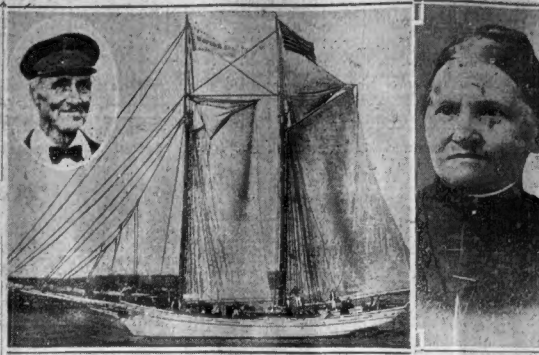

The winners of the Boston Evening American - Low's State Theatre "Early to Wed" competition are Captain and Mrs. Loring Fuller, of South Yarmouth, married 73 years ago on January 6, 1853.

The Evening American and Low's State Theatre, where the film play "Early to Wed" is being shown, will invite Captain and Mrs. Fuller to take a trip at the expense of newspaper and theatre to either Niagara Falls or Washington.

The skipper of the David R. Alken and his dear old wife have been married longer than any other New Englanders of the more than 60 venerable pairs whose names and marriage dates were brought to the attention of the "Early to Wed" editor. Captain Fuller was 25 years old in January, last. Mrs. Fuller is his junior by four years.

One fact established by this unique contest is that in New England the golden wedding, if not exactly commonplace, is by no means uncommon. Another outstanding fact is the pitiable value of children to the wedded pair who have grown old together. This point might be emphasized to the extent of saying, "Blessed and happy are the father and mother to whom the Lord hath given daughters."

The "Early to Wed," or "second honeymoon" contest, was held for the purpose of calling attention to the film play. A first announcement, made on Tuesday of last week, was followed by the receipt of names from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. As will be seen by

'HOME IS THE SAILOR, HOME FROM THE SEA'
But as his thoughts turn back nowadays to the packet David K. Atken, Captain Fuller is sure no other man's life can have been much happier.

the list, written herewith, most of are residents of Massachusetts. As late as Saturday, last, the

MARY FULLER

"Early to Wed" editor felt certain he had used a Massachusetts couple in his contest. He had heard of Captain and Mrs. Fuller, married 73 years. He was making ready to call upon them when he heard of a New Hampshire couple, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Merrill of Salem Depot, who were married 70 years ago, in 1856. Now, however, the facts regarding the marriage of Captain and Mrs. Fuller, three years earlier than the marriage of Merrill and his wife, have been established. Captain Fuller, 95 years old and 6 ft., 4 in. tall in his stocking feet, for 30 years ran a packet of his own from South Yarmouth to New York, for coal and grain. His first vessel was the S. K. Lane and his second the David K. Alken. The Lane was in service for 18 years and the Alken 18 years. Mrs. Fuller, 91 years old, threads her needle without the aid of spectacles, reads her daily newspaper and has knitted eight bedspreads. Nothing about this remarkable woman suggests her years. If her age were given as 71 it would not be questioned. The skipper himself is still a fine figure of a man, with a voice calculated to frighten a more timid man than his wife, but unfortunately his sight is greatly impaired and going on a second honeymoon journey is, in his case, out of the question. He and Mrs. Fuller will be urged, instead, to accept a check for the full amount, the journey would have cost.

The Ten Dollars in Gold offered by the reader who should put the Boston Evening American and Low's Theatre in touch with the winners is awarded to Mr. L. Fletcher of Boston, of South Yarmouth. Low's State Theatre, in addition, will invite Mr. Fletcher to organize a box party, for "Early to Wed." Owner and master of his own packets for 30 years, Captain Fuller retired that many years ago to devote all his time to his grain and coal business at South Yarmouth. Two daughters, Mrs. Lizzie B. Farrington and Mrs. Mervin L. Kelley, make their homes with their father and mother. One son, Joseph W., in the old days his father's mate on the Lane and Alken, died at the age of 22.

Some of the names sent in to the "Early to Wed" editor came from the old folk themselves, some from children or grandchildren, some from strangers who enclosed newspaper clippings. The following list is approximately complete and the youngest couple named have been married at least fifty years.

THIS IS THE LIST:

In Meloripe

you'll taste the subtle flavor of a perfect banana

THAT delicate flavor is usually lost. Only perfect ripening can retain it. But you can find it in Meloripe, always, because Meloripe bananas are slowly, evenly, thoroughly ripened, as perfectly as though by the sunshine of the Tropics.

You will find this flavor a delightful surprise. It makes the familiar banana a new table dainty. You never tire of it. No matter how many recipes you try (and there are scores of them) the Meloripe flavor is always new, always delicious.

And in addition, because they are properly ripened, Meloripe bananas are wonderfully nutritious, with a food value that surpasses all other fresh fruits and most of the vegetables. They are an excellent food for children as well as grown-ups, especially because they are so easily digested. This is the new treat your dealer has waiting for you. Meloripe bananas, ripe, delicious, nutritious, digestible, clearly and conveniently packed in boxes of 6. The large size is "Royal" and the next size is "Queen." The difference is only in size; both are perfect fruit—a tropical treat for your Boston table.

HOVEY'S STORE RENOVATED

The complete transformation of the interior of the C. H. Covey store on Summer street, according to plans of the architect, flashed nightly during the past year. He is a step towards the new era of the department store's 65th anniversary party, a triumph of ingenuity of which few Bostonians are aware.

Extensive enlargements and important changes for better service as well as complete redecoration were made without disturbing the ordinary business routine in the store. As a result, present-day department stores are the public for the present time in celebration of Founder's Week.

The alterations included a new main floor with modern fixtures, wider aisles and 18 special carpet lamp jewelry, toilet goods and perfume departments, a new entrance vestibule, an Oriental bazaar, and enlargement of the men's and women's dress and

The Time to Aid True Temperance Is Now

Far-ripped persons see danger in the refusal of stubborn drys to think that Volsteadism, with its sapping of temperance and respect for law, is not the last word.

Observing the growth of the reaction against prohibition, they fear lest it may carry the country back to the worst evils of the former liquor regime. That able Journal, The Commonwealth, for instance, thus sounds warning:

"For those who are interested in settling the liquor problem rightly, the time to take salutary steps is now. Repudiation of Volsteadism will come of itself, inevitably; the thing to be done is to make what follows Volsteadism less sinister and uncivilized."

That is precisely the position of this newspaper. Fanaticism is much easier than sanity, but less safe. It is sanity of the constructive type that friends of temperance need to emphasize in this country today.

The saloon will not come back, but the present evils of intemperance, in some respects more dangerous than the saloon era at its worst, can be greatly lessened if prejudice is waived and statesmanship employed.

America has tried three attitudes toward the liquor problem, and each has failed.

It first tried letting the evil alone, and it grew worse. It next tried regulation by license, and that did not satisfy.

It then tried fanatic prohibition, and that has proved the saddest failure of all, because with the impossible attempt to make men dry by compulsion went almost complete stoppage of temperance progress by education and moral suasion, which had made headway during both of the preceding eras.

This sane form of moral advance can be resumed whenever the forces of temperance will concentrate upon it. But they cannot concentrate upon it while the nation is in turmoil over the abuses of prohibition.

To free the friends of temperance for constructive progress it is first necessary to release them from the prohibition trap. They cannot go on while fettered to a failure.

A fourth experiment remains to be tested—legalization of light wine and beer, their sale through Government agencies exclusively and use of the profit in a joint attack on the narcotic drug evil and on bootlegging of hard liquors.

This would reconcile to temperance millions of citizens now outraged and rebellious on account of prohibition. It would reduce the amount of and strengthen the resistance to illicit liquor selling.

It would permit renewed and hopeful appeals to individual consciences in furtherance of personal temperance or abstinence.

The Homer Loring "Blues"

Portsmouth Is "Down Sick" of Them

Chairman Homer Loring, of the Boston & Maine Railroad's board of directors, visits Portsmouth, heads the local Chamber of Commerce in its headquarters, and says yes, the Boston & Maine is going to abandon that portion of its Eastern division lying between the New Hampshire seaport and North Berwick, Maine.

Mr. Loring did NOT say, "And what are you going to do about it?" but he appears to have left that impression.

Not only that, but the present ruler of the big northern railroad corporation reveals that he and his associates have been "considering" the abandonment of the Portsmouth branch, so called, from Portsmouth to Manchester. This is the road over which legislators ride to and from the State capital.

Nothing will be done with respect to the Portsmouth branch, Mr. Loring intimates, so long as coal continues to be shipped up-State from the seaport in any worthwhile quantity.

Mr. Loring talked frankly. He may have enjoyed his visit, but it was a blue day for Portsmouth and enough to give Epping and Raymond "the creeps." Once upon a time, New Hampshire folk used to complain that they were "ruled" from the North Station. Now, some of them will be complaining that they are threatened with "ruin," from the same direction.

Mr. Loring is looking out first for the interests of those who own his railroad, but his high-speed-and-few-steps expresses, the Boston & Maine's ambition to hog the bus business, and these continued talks of possible abandonments, are NOT making him popular in New Hampshire.

If there SHOULD be any "railroad" candidates for the House this year, they'll have hard sledding.

One Plus One Equals Two

And Everybody Knows It, Including the Old Guard

Like the fellow who came to the conclusion that "perhaps they do not want me in there," for he had been thrown into the snow three times from the dancethall window, it is beginning to dawn upon friends of the World Court, here and there, that the American people want NO connection, near or remote, with any sub-division of the League of Nations.

The Portland, Me. Press-Herald, commenting on the fact that "up to this time every tried and true Republican Senator" who voted for the World Court and who has come before the people in the primaries has suffered defeat, says the series of disasters "puzzles the Old Guard."

Why should it? There isn't any reason why the rejection of McKinley of Illinois, Pepper of Pennsylvania, and Stanford of Oregon should puzzle anyone, old guard or new.

"On the other hand," says the Maine newspaper, "two United States Senators who opposed the President in the World Court issue and who have been through the primaries have been re-elected."

"This may be only a series of coincidences, but some people profess to see in these elections a DETERMINATION ON THE PART OF THE PEOPLE TO PUNISH THE WORLD COURT SENATORS. It is disturbing the Old Guard at Washington a great deal because it cannot be understood."

Well, maybe, but we don't believe it. The Old Guard has its faults, goodness knows, but stupidity never has been one of them. It is old Granddaddy that it was said "HE wouldn't tumble, if a brick house fell on him!"

DOMESTIC SERVICE A GREAT PROBLEM

By DR. FRANK CRANE

CONGRESSMAN ROSE BLOOM says that having in mind that the question of domestic servants is a serious one, he has introduced an amendment to the immigration act providing that a European woman who has engaged in domestic service for at least one year preceding her request for admission to the United States, and expects to engage in domestic service at least three years after her arrival here, may be added as a non-quota immigrant to the number of those coming from her country.

The problem of domestic service is a very vital one to many a housewife.

During his survey of economic conditions in Europe the past Summer Congressman Bloom was very much impressed by the potential good of such an amendment.

The American contemplating domestic service is repelled from the idea by such words as "subserviency" and "aiguane." Besides this she has a traditional repugnance toward servitude of any kind. Domestic servants are viewed by her as an isolated class.

It is believed, therefore, that we must look elsewhere than in the United States for female help. Europe, with her surplus of female population could solve many of our domestic problems if we adopted the proposed amendment.

It is not the intention of Congressman Bloom to throw down the bars to Orientals, either male or female.

Here in the construction of apartments and dwelling houses every consideration is given to the servants' quarters, which are made as pleasant as other parts of the house. Because of this fact domestic servants will not leave their work as they do in Europe, where conditions are unfavorable for them.

Compensation also is better here and the increased wages cannot fail to draw many women from abroad, and thus our urgent need can be filled up by Europe's surplus female help.

Two hundred million dollars is expended annually for domestic help in the United States, and 3,400,000 persons annually are in domestic service.

There is a constant tendency to desert private house-keeping enterprises for careers more public, as is shown by the figures of the number of women engaged as barbers, hair-dressers, manicurists, and so on, even though house service be easier than that of public work.

There is much to be said in favor of the proposed plan of Congressman Bloom.

WHEN A VACATION PROVES NOT A VACATION

And now it is about time that an annual dispute as to where the annual vacation is to be spent.

If a wife, you may feel that you want to go to a place where you must persons whom you would like to know back in town. That is the reason why you favor a certain resort that your husband says is "too expensive."

But really, very little prestige is gained as a result of meeting people at Summer resorts.

There is a big difference between the clam of gilded friends at the lake, seashore or mountain resorts and those whom you class as friends at home.

Other those who put on the most and create the biggest impression at the Summer resorts are never heard from anywhere else. Consider what you need each year for health and enjoyment. Then decide upon a place where each can get his or her own fun, so take your vacation separately.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVEN't a rug on my floor.

It is a small rug, neat woven, plaited by the wind and sun and earth.

The warp is dull, like old and mellowed gold. Through it there runs a wood of fiery gray and heather purple, with glints of green and blue and blue.

Sometimes there's even one bright flash of scarlet, like a spurt of flame. A lovely rug, yet with a pathos in its loveliness that moves the heart.

The margins are not even, and in little places the design has gone astray as though the weaving fingers blundered on the loom. They did.

The one who made that rug was blind.

All day that weaver sits and weaves those vivid strands through the dull warp outspread before his darkened face. He has a chart and numbered pegs by which he grips his way. And so he works and weaves within his ending night, building a world of mingled shades and song, a beauty strip which shows the artist light that glows within his soul, although his eyes are dark.

But sometimes he forgets—his fingers slip—he is tired and puzzled by it all—or maybe startled by the fact that shade him in. And then the margins go away or the design is marred.

So weaves my weaver—so weave I. For I, too, work in darkness when I cannot pierce.

And I, too, make a pattern which I cannot see nor understand. And the loom is a frame for the way of my days. The warp is the last web of daily toil. I did not plan that warp upon which I came that Master had it waiting when I came that way.

I weave the pattern of my life. Sometimes the thread is cool and green. Sometimes it is scarlet like a little flame, when some brave work or tall adventure lights my day. Sometimes it is purest gold—the gold of love. Or sometimes purple with the agony of grief—or gray with fear—my dirge with my sin. And yet again, it is bleached white with prayer.

Whatever comes, I weave and weave and weave. All that I am does there, into my rug.

One day I will weave straight, like some proud master of my craft. And then my fingers slip and all the plan is marred.

So I weaver I start the thread with bitter hands—and cry aloud with hatred of that loom and of that plan which I may never see complete, nor in my present darkness, understand.

Yet after I have unraveled the thread, I work again. I know not how my rug will look to those who see it. I know not how I may have spoiled the first, bright plan. But I am hoping that the One who gave the loom and stretched the warp on which I was to weave, will take the ragged product when my day is done and say: "She wrought some beauty though her eyes were blind."

HOW METEORS FALL IN SHOWERS

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"I have noticed in an almanac several times that showers of meteors occur every seven days. I do not understand how scientists are able to predict the arrival of these meteors, because our solar system is constantly entering new space that they know nothing about.—K. L. New York."

SHOWERS of meteors do not occur every seven days. There are a few conspicuous showers which recur once a year in more or less abundance.

The three principal showers are the "Perseids" which come most abundantly about August 12, radiating from the constellation Perseus, which at that season rises in the northern hemisphere; and it is to the "Leonids," which are due on the night of November 13, radiating from the "buckle" in the constellation Leo, which then rises in the west about midnight, and the "Andromedids," which appear about November 24, radiating from the constellation Andromeda, which is then nearly overhead between 8 and 10 o'clock.

Resemble Each Other

The meteors of these three remarkable showers exhibit, as Professor Young has said, "certain family resemblances." Thus the Perseids are yellow and move with great speed, the Leonids are red and swift, leave vivid trails; the Andromedids are reddish and slow in their movements.

The speed of a meteor in the atmosphere, with reference to the earth, depends upon the direction in which it is traveling when it encounters the atmosphere. The direction, according to that of the earth's motion in its orbit, the speed of the meteor is reduced, as happens with the Andromedids. If the meteor is nearly at right angles to that of the earth's motion, the speed is increased, as happens with the Leonids, the speed becomes very great, and may be as much as forty-five miles per second.

No doubt the temperature to which the meteor is subjected by its friction with the air is much affected by these factors, which have the greater velocities, and a visual indication of this is afforded by the colors; thus the slow-moving Andromedids are reddish, the more rapid Perseids are yellow and the swift Leonids are bluish-green and leave vivid trails, while the Andromedids leave short and relatively inconspicuous trails.

Any person, without employing any instrument but his eyes, could make extremely interesting and valuable observations on the color, relative speed and other peculiarities of these and other periodical meteors. Begin next August 12, starting your vigil a night ahead of time, and continuing it an extra night, counting your meteors, so many per hour, and noting their paths across the constellations. Keep a record, like a fisherman, and tell your friends about it. Why should you not be as interesting to hear as I am not? "I saw three hundred meteors, last night," as that "I caught a basketful of fish."

Frequently the "Lyrids" radiating from the constellation Lyra, near the bright Northern star named Vega or Alpha Lyrae, appear in April as "Geminids" in May and July, "Orionids" in October, and "Draconids" in January, but these are relatively inconspicuous showers. Though the individual meteors may be bright

At least 300 supposed showers have been listed, playing in all parts of the heavens, like traveling fireworks companies, and in the course of a year many thousands of individuals are not yet grouped in any systematic order, as to say nothing of the occasional great fireball, which are a kind of giant meteor, coming from the earth's own atmosphere. These are the big fish. When you catch one of them you will not have to call upon your imagination to tell the reason why astronomers can tell the annual arrival of certain meteor showers is because these meteors travel in almost continuous lines around the sun, and every year when the earth crosses their orbits in its journey around the sun, the meteors are caught in the atmosphere.
